

College of Sciences Career Guide Bachelor of Science in General Science

About the Major

The Bachelor of Science in General Science degree allows for curriculum flexibility to support careers in various science fields. This degree is designed for current and returning students who desire flexibility within the sciences to accommodate existing STEM coursework. This major can assist student who are seeking careers in healthcare, STEM (science, technology, engineering, mathematics) education, natural resource and energy utilization, and wildlife management. Career fields are highly dependent on elective choices, which can be identified by visiting with an advisor in the College of Sciences.

Skills

Problem Solving
Ability to Interpret Data
Critical Thinking
Research
Ability to Operate Scientific Equipment
Mathematical Reasoning
Technical Writing

Common Career Areas for this Major

STEM Education
Data and Analytics
Natural Resources and Energy Utilization
Wildlife Management
Healthcare